I pay for my satellite radio subscription just like I pay for my monthly internet access. I have a right to listen to what I want when I want. As for competition between satellite and regular AM/FM broadcasting, then maybe those stations should take note of what satellite is doing and why it is becoming so wildly popular instead of sitting on their butts wanting someone else (the FCC) to do their work for them. If the FCC wants to do something productive and useful then get after the spammers, telemarketers and blast faxers - just leave satellite radio providers alone.

Thank you for your time,
Billie
